Glazebrook Sentenced 30 to 60 Years for Witness Tampering and Terroristic Threats

LINCOLN - Attorney General Jon Bruning today announced Jeffrey Glazebrook, 52, of Saunders County, was sentenced 30 to 60 years in prison each for one count of tampering with a witness and one count of making terroristic threats, both Class IV felonies. The felony penalties were enhanced due to his habitual criminal status. The sentences will run concurrently and he will be required to serve at least 20 years in prison because he is a habitual criminal.

“This man’s continued disregard for the law proves he is a threat to society,” said Bruning. “We’re pleased the court recognized this danger and put Mr. Glazebrook behind bars where he belongs.”

During Glazebrook’s 2009 murder trial in Saunders County, he attempted to clandestinely threaten to kill a testifying witness. He was observed doing so by several jurors. Glazebrook was ultimately convicted of murdering an elderly woman, Sadie May McReynolds, in that trial. However, the conviction was overturned by the Nebraska Supreme Court due to the erroneous admission of evidence of Glazebrook’s sexual and physical assaults of other women.

The case was handled by Assistant Attorneys General Corey O’Brien and Matt Lierman.
